

Hi all!

I know that we have not gone into the details of the code. The course was intentionally designed this way.

I didn't want you guys to focus too much on the code and get overwhelmed. The code is not that important for now, trading concepts are more important.

After grasping the trading concepts, you guys will better understand what we are trying to achieve. A plus point is this will probably make you more motivated and interested to push through the content.

I've taken coding courses that are really dry (in fact, most of them are dry) and I was taught the foundations without understanding the purpose of what I was doing or the big picture. I didn't enjoy that style. It took more willpower than expected.

We'll cover the code more in the later chapters =)

Cheers,

Lucas
